“ Hello Marty. I left this message on FB too but I am not sure you will see it.

Just tonight I learned of Suzan's passing. I am so sorry. Suzan and I met when we lived on the east side. Chris and my daughter Sydney went to Horace Mann in those days. Suzan and I had some good times way back then and I always admired her artistry. She was a good listener, had a lot of common sense, and had a great laugh. I'll always remember the beautiful pot she painted for me. It was turquoise with a white picket fence meticulously painted all the way around its sides and it had little vines of pink roses intertwined here and there throughout the fence. The detail was amazing and I had it for many years until it became rootbound and broke apart. I loved that pot but even more I loved the care and effort that Suzan took in creating it just for me. We lost touch when we moved in different directions but we found each other again on FB. She shared pictures of her precious Abby along with Chris all grown up and his beautiful bride June. She was so proud of Chris's service and promotions. I just want you to know I'm going to miss Suzan and the friendship we rekindled after so many years. We had talked about getting together a couple of times but sadly, never made it happen. My sincere condolences. She was special. ❤️

“ Once upon a time we were driving in San Antonio, Texas. We drove around the city 3 times trying to find our turn off. I heard Suzan call me a bum for missing it so many times and then we hit a bump in the road. Both of our heads hit the ceiling of the car and then she told me "I told you there was a bump". So much for hearing after two long days of driving. We laughed and soon after found our exit.
